RADFORD UNIVERSITY

Radford University International Education

Where Will Your Learning Take You?

Make Your Classroom the World

The Radford University International Education Center (IEC) prepares students from all majors for the global economy and the multicultural world in which they will work and live upon graduation. Offering both language immersion programs and travel study classes from trusted international partners, Radford University's study abroad programs allow students to learn new languages and experience new cultures, while internships and research opportunities offer practical, career-focused learning abroad.

You Get to Choose

There isn't just one way to study abroad at Radford University. Some students participate in semester-long exchange programs, while others research topics on campus and later travel abroad to learn about them firsthand.

Opportunities include:

- Short-term study abroad (as brief as three weeks)
- Long-term study abroad (semester-length or up to a year)
- Exchange programs
- Volunteer opportunities
- Internships

Take the Road Less Traveled to Your Degree

Studying abroad with the IEC is not a detour on the road to getting your degree. It is a deeply rewarding learning experience, both in the classroom and the world-at-large. With oceans of experience to immerse themselves in abroad, students build vital job skills for their future careers – like language proficiency, cultural sensitivity, adaptability and strong interpersonal communication – and, while they are at it, they earn credit toward their degrees.

Fun and Feasible

Studying abroad does not have to come with a high price tag. In fact, many of our exchange programs are comparable to attending Radford in cost. Plus, with over 100 grants and scholarships, including Radford University's own McGlothlin Student Education Abroad awards and Kirk Scholars program, many students receive financial assistance.

"It was such a short time, but so powerful. It changed my outlook on the world in general."

"I only spent about $2,500 more than I would have for a semester at home, but the journey has proven invaluable. I can't recommend studying abroad enough; it's worth every penny and more!"

"I was always one of those who made excuses about one thing or another, like cost, but it was so worth it."

Michelle Maurer '14

"We often get caught up in our lives so much that we lose sight of what is important. Studying abroad not only allows you to see so many new things, it opens your eyes to more than you could have ever imagined."
