

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

I want to thank the women who to my amazement once chose to dance the dance of life with me. The gift of hope has been their gift to me as I saw them choosing to be of service to young people as they reached out to them with a gentle touch. They brightened my life with their power to challenge and to grow and inspired me with their indomitable will. Within our relationship intuition found a receptive home and spoke to us freely and with a nurturing embrace. Most of all, I want to thank them for sharing themselves in our journey of an ever broadening and encompassing ability to be loving and unconditional in our lives.

I want to thank the “What’s Missing” group that invited the intuition to attend on a weekly basis, and from which so much was explored. I want to thank Lois Madson for hosting this group with such love, care, concern and whose nurturing nature frees love to embrace all who enters her home. I want to thank Cami Levin whose ability to listen is just the surface of the deep river of her life that so strongly reflects in her ability to encourage the kindness in each person she meets. I want to thank Lynn Peterson who asks all the right questions, who demonstrates her trust by sharing so deeply, and who has the courage to live intuition’s responses. I want to thank Margaret McClean whose deep commitment to service, strength of character, focus of purpose, and sense of humor anchors all who would explore the unknown. Of course, I want to thank my children, Seth, Hannah, Naomi, and Micah and my grandchildren Mia, Lola, Daniela, Lucia, Jona Jane, and Suzannah Sky who are my playmates in the Dojo of our ever strengthening family, and whose enthusiasm challenges me to greater heights in my ability to martial my courage and power.

I want to thank my parents, and my brother and sisters for my unusual experience with them that started me on the path to seek the answer to the mystery of human conflict and for their years of encouragement that promoted an ever-deepening sense of urgency.

I want to thank Paula, my best friend whose all-encompassing love emanates the warmth and nurturing of The Mother. She is endless in her compassion for children and opens her heart and arms to all of them. Listening to their laughter they buzz around her like bees in a pollen rich field of spring flowers. She knows the meaning of culture and is a most valiant warrior in the struggle to support the ancient ways that are the foundation of humanity.

I want to give special thanks to my dearest mentor Nature, who supports and encourages my vision, who speaks to me in that special way, who readily accepts my illness and daily heals me, who smiles upon me while I live in balance, who willingly comes into my arms everyday when I embrace the sunlight, the breeze, the rain, the earth, the growth of life that adorns and nurtures all, the night and heavens that guide and protect the sentient and non-sentient beings of existence. I so deeply appreciate Her gift of reaching out to me when I was lost and deep in despair, for Her nurturing me back from depths of anger and frustration, for her guiding me to the pathway of my potential, and for Her happily choosing to nudge me to remember that all of us are Her family as well as our sacred home.
