

Humanity Prologue

This section is a collection of articles that I wrote from an experiential/intuitive foundation of inquiry into the inner aspects of my mind. I assume that the relevance of this inquiry may be of interest to other people who find the subject of their own minds somewhat of a mystery. The writing of these articles was over a good number of years. Every so often I would reread an article and I might come out of that with wondering what in the hell did I write. So I'd jump back into it and edit so that it made sense to me. One of the relevant aspects of rereading the articles was that when I originally wrote it the article felt insightful as well as instructive. I couldn't help but to wonder what had happened during the intervening years. I had to be in a strange mood, but then I became aware that when I completed editing the article I felt that, yeah, now it is insightful as well as instructive. Hmm. Déjà Vu? Then when I went through all of the articles during the last few months, Yep, there I was again editing and coming out of the edit feeling, Yes, now it is really insightful and instructive. So...
