

Personal Statement

Why I should be given an internship with Vice Media

I care deeply about the world and its people. I value the truth and entertainment and believe that citizens deserve to remain informed and knowledgeable about our society, while remaining engaged and entertained if possible. I have a passion for storytelling that is long-held and I greatly desire the proper platform and training which will enable me to disseminate information I have to share in the most effective way possible. An editorial internship with Vice will help facilitate my life's purpose of reaching out and touching the masses with information with the goal of creating a positive impact on society resulting in positive social change. I intend for my work to promote public awareness, spark productive conversations, bestow empowerment and force evolution, while at the same time bringing some sort of inner peace and contentment. Within me lies all that is needed, including the necessary potential, passion and determination, to make a difference for Vice and its very special audience!
