ALERT, INCOMING TRANSMISSION!

Blenderbox are over the moon (and galaxy) to announce the launch (in every sense) of Global Problem Solvers: The Series, which officially blasted into the webisphere last Friday! GPS is a digital and interactive program designed for students, helping them develop skills like complex problem solving, critical thinking, creativity, management and team work. Our future entrepreneurs are in good hands!

We are DELIGHTED to finally announce the launch of this special project - cepf.net. CEPF (Critical Ecosystem Partnership Fund) is a unique conservation organization on a mission to protect the world's biodiversity hotspots from crisis.

They focus on engaging with local communities in tackling issues of sustainable development and protecting the world's species, and work on both government and nongovernmental partnerships in providing their grants.

Their favorite elements of the new site are its themed Learning Section, updated visual design, and database of web pages for each project.

We continue to be inspired, educated and motivated by our clients, and are proud to be involved in creating an accessible and engaging platform for initiatives like those of CEPF.

"The way we acquire knowledge and skills is going to fundamentally change due to the introduction of new technologies supporting flexible and personalized learning models."

Technology is set to play a transformational role in the world of education - and we're ready to embrace this, "in the context of an open, collaborative, lifelong learning experience."

A lot of our work here at Blenderbox involves the education sector, and we believe that pioneering new technology can have a truly positive impact by improving a user's online experience. Our websites and system integrations are designed so that schools, universities, organizations and even businesses can reach that goal of providing a "high-impact, personalized, and adaptive learning experience."

You may have noticed your email inbox flooding recently with company policy updates. This has been prompted by the new GDPR legal framework, which goes into effect as of today in the EU - however, US companies are far from exempt from its implications. Jason, CEO here at Blenderbox, gives his top 5 tips on how you can make your US-based website more compliant. Don't forget to do your homework, however, and seek legal advice if you have any doubts on how you can best meet the new regulations and stay tip-top transparent! #gdpr #data
