NOT HAUTE!

Jaina Kumar | HRM

>> This designer seemed to have extra cloth and didn't know where else to put it

We understand that certain fashion is edgy and a bit over-the-top, but some trends take it to an entirely different and often bizarre level. Rhea Dhanbhoora & Gargi Bansod list out some offenders that shouldn't be turning into trends

How many times have you looked at outfits on the catwalk and wondered 'Who in their right mind would wear thaaat?' We know fashion is exaggerated, but at times, even the toned down trend would not be practical for real life. While some fashion is so bad that we think the stylists deserve to go back to school, other trends look decent on the ramp but translate into horrible off-the-ramp looks. Most edgy, experimental fashion should, in our books at least, stay on the ramp. Take a look at some questionable trends and read what a few designers have to say about the fashion trends they're not on board with.

>> We're on board with the jumpsuit trend, but we aren't big fans of this blue ruffled one with its lacy and chokey neckpiece. (Left) This sheer pink jumpsuit (middle), with what looks like a bathing suit underneath, just isn't working. (Right) We're not sure what the designer was going for with this look, but it looks like a cross between a shirt, dress and ill-fitting pyjamas — but at least they were considerate enough to leave breathing room for sweaty underarms
