

Plus, our top tips for staying connected with your customers | View online

As we continue to adapt ourselves to the new normal, taking care of our own physical and mental wellbeing is as important as ever. That's why I've chosen to dedicate this newsletter to the ways in which our favourite things – our gardens and our pets – can help us to pull through and find positivity in the simple things.

Of course, so much of this positivity comes from staying in touch with our communities and continuing to support one another. That's why I've also included our guide to using social media to stay connected with your business communities during this time.

As garden centres reopen across the UK, don't miss our dedicated webinar. We have gathered garden centre owners from around the country to take part in a virtual round table. They will be discussing the lessons learnt from lockdown and sharing insights from their first week back in business. This exclusive webinar will take place on Thursday 21st May at 5pm.

We're still keen to hear your stories of kindness and your words of advice and positivity for the Glee community. Please keep sending them through using the link below.
