

Hannah's Highschool: Fashion City

Dialogue with Branching Paths and Multiple Choice + How it Fits in Larger Narrative

Script, Flowcharts, Storyboards

Branching Dialogue: Version #1

The Most Simplistic

As TutoTOONS team has never tried implementing dialogue with choice in their games before, I have decided to start small, to try out a short and simple dialogue between the titular Hannah and her boyfriend Jack.

Branching Dialogue: #2

The Most Complex

The first variant has shown promise, but the team wanted to see something more substantial. Afterwards I have written a large and complex dialogue with multiple paths leading from practically every question. The task was challenging; I have learned how to branch a single thread into myriad directions and later on join them in a more manageable number of points.

Introductory Scenes

Jack and Hannah casually walk on beach, Hannah notices sea shell. Jack gets super excited:

„Hannah... That’s Cabrit’s Murex! It’s super rare! And intact – you see that spine thingy? It’s almost never intact, it’s very fragile - wait. Hannah. Would you. Like. To collect some seashells with me?”

“Ok, I guess. Seashells are pretty.”

“YES! That is sooo cool. Hey, and look! That little guy is Cerith. Pretty common, but still beautiful. Oh, and that one...”

Jack slides out to the right. Hannah is slightly confused.

Tap a mole template. “Correct moles” – seashells. Every time you press a “correct object” Jack enthusiastically tells something about it. “Wrong moles” are alive sea creatures. Jack asks to leave them be, release them back to freedom.

Next scene – Jack demonstrates his knowledge and Geeky personality by bombarding Hannah with a bunch of encyclopedic facts about Florida’s sea life. It can be done in fast forward, chipmunk style, as the facts themselves are not important and the scene played for comedy.

Hannah’s character portrait: Hannah is depicted with a raised eyebrow, visibly surprised and slightly amused. Jack stops mid-sentence and blushes.

Awkward silence.

Start of the branching dialogue sequence.

1. Jack: „Does that bother you?“

Hannah 1.1: „What exactly?“

Hannah 1.2: „I just thought you were... Well, I never knew that about you.“

Hannah 1.3: „No. Not at all.“

2. IF 1.1:

Hannah: „What exactly?“

Jack: „You know. Me. Obsessing over... seashells?“

Hannah 2.1: „I thought it was super cute, Jack.“

Hannah 2.2: „Were you obsessing?“

Hannah 2.3: „Why seashells, though?“

3. IF 1.2:

Hannah: „I just thought you were... Well, I never knew that about you.“

Jack: „What DID you think of me, Hannah?“

5. IF 2.1:

Hannah 5.2: „No. Seriously, I was a bit surprised, but, you know, in a good way.“

Hannah 5.3: „Pu-lease. You are the cutest. Or do you imply that I am WRONG?“

6. IF 2.2:

Hannah: „Were you obsessing?“

Jack: „No. Well... I don’t know. I just... REALLY like them.“

Hannah 6.1: „Jack, what the heck? „Little Mermaid“ is one thing, but having a thing for shellfish? There is only so much a girlfriend can handle.“

Hannah 6.2 „Sounds like obsession to me.“

Hannah 6.3: „Don’t worry; I understand.“

7. IF 2.3:

Hannah: „Why seashells, though?“

Jack: "...What?"

Hannah 13.1: "Like, usually it's fine, but imaging having cravings for coke in a middle of the of the night in, like, a bad neighborhood. Don't know why would you go for coke there, but it's possible, right? And a police officer appears and asks what are you doing this late and you say "buying coke?" Doesn't sound good. Not good at all, Jack."

Hannah 13.2: "...What?"

Hannah 13.3: "Sorry. And no, I am not weirded out."

Branching Dialogue Version #3

Final Version (Medium Complexity)

The team deemed the second dialogue too complex and too relationship-driven. I have opted to make the third – and final – version of the dialogue less systematically complex (only making a handful of real choices). Furthermore, I have decided to have Hannah and Jack talk about trivial things and provide some character development through that triviality – after all, people rarely spout exposition about themselves, but the way they handle trivial subjects provide that information nevertheless.

Introduction

Jack: Oh my- Hannah. Can we stop here for a moment?

Hannah: What's up?

Jack: Look at the beach! It's terrible! (fone matome, kad paplūdimys šiukšlinas)

Hannah 1.1: what is? 😐

Hannah 1.2: Oh God. You're right. 😐

IF 1.1:

Hannah: What's terrible? It's just some trash.

They are trapped beneath the trash.

2.1 You're so sweet! 😊

2.2 Who cares. 😐

IF 1.2

Hannah: Yeah, they are professionals, they can help. Also – I'm kinda starving.

Jack: Roger that. I'll just phone the beach guard volunteers and we will set up our picnic.

BUTTON 3: SET UP PICNIC (skips entire activity and dialogue).

IF 5.2

Hannah: No. You're right. There's no time to waste.
